

Global Module Our FLG Children's Rights World Cup

Our common FLG Children's Rights World Cup

Naturally we won't forget the actual street football games themselves in our common global project! Within the framework of our project, the partner organizations, schools, and, most importantly, the involved youth, will organize and implement local, regional and / or national children's rights world cup. Each country has the opportunity to decide how this will occur in their respective countries. The project itself is very flexible: whether to have many local or some regional tournaments or even if a single national event, each country has the final say. The only certainty is that all of the matches, be they local, regional, or national, will be counted in the same way in our common global Children's Rights World Cup.

In all tournaments, the participating teams play as representatives for Brazil, Cambodia, Chile, Germany, Kenya, Israel/Palestine (which will play as one team according to the philosophy of the Peres Center for Peace), Paraguay and Rwanda.

This guarantees that all of the countries taking part in our project will be thereby represented locally (be it on the playground, at the local marketplace, on a blocked street, etc). These countries can be allotted prior to the beginning of the Street Football World Cup, as well as assigned upon application at the school.

How does our Children's Rights World Cup work?

Every organization, school, or team of youths who takes part in our project can contribute with their own local World Cup to our global Children's Rights World Cup. For this reason we want to plan and implement all local tournaments so that in principle, each tournament has the same participating countries and follows the same rules considering the table of positions.

💡 World Cups during the recess breaks

Your local Children's Rights World Cup doesn't necessarily need to take place on one day. In our last project many schools played their local World Cup during the recess breaks for several days or even weeks. By doing this, these students were making sure that they had a large audience!
